Stereo Biplane

Release Date: Mar. 8th, 2010

The debut from a new band of four Pacific Northwest music veterans, this album is a melange of rock and roll, country and western, reggae roots and psychedelic pop. Featuring three singer/songwriters, the music is a blend of rhythmic muscle, hip hooks and nourishing lyrics. Conceived around a campfire then electrified in the studio, it has a rich, vintage sound that stirs memories and lingers on the palate.

L.A. and Seattle session-ace Steve Leigh produced the tracks and lays a solid sonic foundation. His opener "Love So Deep" and epic "Won't Stop Loving You" echo classic songwriter stylings from the 70's.

Louisiana-born Getty creates a steamy bayou on the Puget Sound where ghosts of old friends are conjured. His funky pop-rock "Point Blank" channels bands of southern brothers while "One Salty Tear" rains hints of early mother-love grunge.

Riding from his digital rockabilly ballad "Wish Me Luck" to disco-reggae spiritual "Uplink", David Baumert's songs look for the high ground from the low road.

Big Catholic Guilt alumnus Tim Osborne changes drum costumes frequently. Re-working precision machinery into flexible feel, his contributions span bombastic thunder on Steve's "All About You" to a traveling shuffle on Getty's "West on I-10".
